OLD CITIZEN PASSES AWAY

After a Short Illness Andrew Wallace Dies at the Age of Seventy-Seven.

His Life Made Up a Part of Indiagapolis's History-Prominent in Business and Polities-Reverses in Forture.

Andrew Wallace, for many years a prominent and well-known figure in Indianapolis, died Friday evening, at 8:15, at his residence at No. 86 North Delaware street. His age was seventy-seven years. It is only a few months since Mr. Wallace's wife died. Most of the time since he has been sick with grip and heart failure, which were the cause of his demise. In the days of his prime and activity Mr. Wallace was a conspicuous figure in Indisapolis commercial circles. He came to Indianapolis in 1840. His career up to that time had been a constant struggle with poverty. Previous to his coming here he had been a paper-maker at Madison. Soon after his arrival he became superintendent of the paper factory of Sheets & Yandes. It 1817 Wallace left the employ of this firm and went to Bridgeport, where he took charge of the flouring-mill business of Robert Underhill, and later he was employed as a clerk by Jeremiah Root.
Young Wallace tell out with Root because the latter insisted on his sawing wood in the cellar when customers were scarce, and he embarked in business for himself. He was successful, and became one of his former employer's most formidable competitors. Later on he embarked in the business of purchasing and shipping grain, his transactions attaining dimensions that at that time were considered stupendous. He was a great advertiser, and was the first to inp great advertiser, and was the first to inaugurate the system of paying cash for goods. He was likewise a great mixer, and had a way of capturing the women and children that was irresistible. Few country wagons with produce or grain were permitted to pass his store, and the name of "Andy" Wallace became household words among the farmers of Marion county. These qualities made him immensely popular; he amassed wealth rapidly and outstripped all his competitors in the scramble for busi-

His quarters became too narrow for his growing trade, and he sold out his business on the site of the present Lilly & Stalnaker establishment, leased the corner at Delaware and Virginia avenue, erected a large structure and went into the wholesale business. During the war he bought the opposite corner and erected the Wallace Block. Here he went into the wholesale grocery business, having disposed of his flour and produce business to his nephew, General Foster. In the wholesale grocery business Mr. Wallace was very successful, and amassed a considerable fortune. While an exceedingly busy man with his commercial entanglements, Mr. Wallace had time to devote to public affairs. For eight years he was pres-Ident of the State benevolent institutions when they were all under one management. During the war he enjoyed the entire confidence of Governor Morton, with whom he frequently counseled. He was ppe of the men upon whom the great war Governor leaned for support, and it is Plaimed that he gave substantial financial support at critical times. During the later years of his life Mr.

Wallace encountered financial reverses, and on several occasions some of his sons have involved him in serious trouble. During most of the last fourteen years Mr. Wallace has been interested in Black Rills mines, and most of his time was devoted to the management of the business, One of his sons, "Sank," was with him there, "Sank" became involved in several escapades from which it was difficult to extricate him. He was erratic, and at times showed evidences of mental unsoundness. His father remained loyal to "Sank" and remonstrated with him upon the error of his way, but the son was in-tractable, and finally he turned on his father and shot him with almost fatal results. A short time later "Sank" perished miserably by his own hand. Joseph and lorace, two other sons, are also dead. William Wallace, employed in the mail service, is a highly respected resident of Indianapolis, while George lives in Chi-

The funeral services will occur from the late residence of deceased to-morrow afternoon, at 2 o'clock, under the auspices of the Odd-fellows, of which order Mr. Wallace was for many years a member.

THE OLDEST RAILROAD. Major Pangborn's Discovery Respecting the Baltimore & Ohio.

To Baltimore, says Major J. G. Pangborn, belongs the distinction of having first conceived the railroad as the term is understood to-day, and to this city is due the honor of building the pioneer road of the world. Major Pangborn has been delving into history for months, and has been looking up on both sides of the Atlan-tic the facts bearing on the railroad. The result, he says, is a mass of proof showing that not until the meeting at Mr. George Brown's house, in Baltimore, Feb. 12, 1827, had there been a contemplation of a rail-Robert Gordon, of Indianapolis, spent Sunday here...Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Schuyler spent Sunday in Greenville...Mrs. J. B. road save as a means of increasing the output of mines or quarries by facilitating transportation to water-ways. In other road save as a means of increasing the outwords, all lines up to the organization of the Baltimore & Ohio company were tramways built by coal or quarry companies. The Stockton & Darlington, the English line that was opened in 1825, was a coal road, whose whole equipment consisted of "waggons" for carrying coal. Other freight was transported, but not by the company. Others ran "waggons" over the road when not interfering with coal traffic. As late as 1868, says the Major, three years following the opening of the Baltimore & Ohio line, seven contractors had running privileges over the Stockton & Darlington for passenger carriages. It was not a railroad in the real sense, as a public servant, as was the Baltimore & Ohio from its inception, as the public only had access to it when the company was not discommoded thereby. Later it became a railroad. The Liverpool & Manchester was reality the first European railroad, but it was opened to the public May 22, 1830, six months after the opening of the Baltimore & Ohio. The first shovelful of earth turned in the construction of a railroad in this country was on July 4, 1828, when the corner-stone of the Baltimore & Ohio was laid. The first tram was the Leiper road, in Pennsylvania, in 1809. It was 180 feet long and was for mining. Later, a similar one, a mile long, was constructed in Delaware county. Pennsylvania, to carry stone to Ridway creek. A three-mile tram for car-

When reading an account of Mr. Mennelle's bottle-stand, by which the inadvertant use of poisonous drugs may be avoided, a very ingenious electrical contrivance which I saw about two years ago in the establishment of a chemist at a well-known seaside resort was called to my mind. Under each bottle containing a poisonous substance, as it stood on its shelf, was placed a small metallic disc, which was connected with a wire by a battery. When a bottle was removed a bell was immediately rung, and continued to ring until it (the bottle) was replaced, thus giving unmistakable evidence of the fact that a poisonous drug had been touched. In a word, the action was that of an ordinary electric bell reversed, i, e., the bell rang when pressure on the disc caused by the weight of the bottle) was removed, and vice versa. I may mention that Mr. assured me at the time that the apparatus worked well, was most simple of construction, and very inexpensive.

Got It Back, Cloak Review. "Tell me, dearest, what is it?" As Bertram Calloway uttered these words and gazed down into the face of the fair young creature at his side, he felt instinctively that she was about to give him some new proof of that great devotion which she had so often revealed to him. "I was thinking, dearest," she said, softly, as she shyly looked up into the great, passionate eyes bent so lovingly upon hers. that when we were finally settled down and married, now much I could save you in neckties."

Half an hour later there might have been seen walking swiftly through the almost deserted streets of the great metropolis one who muttered strangely to himself as he paused underneath a friendly lamp post to gaze at a glittering object that he held in his hand. "It's all right," he whispered hoarsely to himself, "that's the same ring."

A Big Snake Vanquished by a Bird. Visalia Times.

Walter Fewell witnessed a novel fight vesterday afternoon between a gopher anake and a kingbird. The contest was fought to finish in the road near the creamery. The snake was a large one and capable of swallowing his feathered opponent with ease, but the bird was too active for him and came out winner. The bird would hover over the snake but a foot or two above its head, and would strike it on the head from time to time, the snake all the while trying to seize the bird, but was unable to do so on account of its rapid movements. After some twenty minutes his snakeship gave up the fight in disgust and harried away to avoid the thrusts of his tormentor.

A Business Secret.

A large manufacturer took into his office a nephew, who, to put it mildly, was rather feeble-minded. One day the nephew came to his uncle and complained of the head clerk, Jones. "Incle, what do you suppose the head clerk, Jones, has been telling people about

"I have no idea." "He has been telling everybody that I am a fool.' "I will see him about it, and tell him to keep quiet. He has no right to expose the secrets of the office."

Why Lost People Walk in a Circle.

Peterson's Weekly. The fact that people lost on a desert or in a forest invariably walk in a circle is due to slight inequality in the length of the legs. Careful measurements of a series of skeletons have shown that only 10 per cent, had the lower limbs equal in length.

longer, unless the tendency of deviation is Corrected by the eye.

The left leg being more frequently the longer, as evidenced by the measurement of the skeleton, the inclination should take place more frequently to the right than to the left, and this conclusion is quite borne out by observations made on a number of persons when walking blindfold. Further, on measurement of the arms it is found that in 72 per cent, the right arm is longer than the left, while in 24 per cent, the left arm is the longer-showing that a considerable majority of persons are right-hand-ed and left-legged. The inequality in the length of limbs is not confined to any particular sex or race, but seems to be uni-
